

Soil respiration in riparian alder stands

We measured soil respiration at 14 sites over two summers. Most sites behaved as expected, but the alder stands near the river kept respiring at almost the summer rate well into October. Temperature explained about half of the variance in the data.